

Emotional Intelligence is the topic that we discussed today in our class. After reading this topic there were many things that I realized. It was a concoction of both strength and weakness.

After reading this topic I realized that there were many things that I have to improve on. I am worse at emotional intelligence. This is something that I have to work on for my personal development. Yes, I do have a great will to accomplish anything though I am not great at it. I think I am a great hard worker but not a smart worker. I am not a social person, so I don't easily get dissolved with everyone. I have great confidence within me but I don't think have that confidence to talk or build a long-lasting social relationship. I am also not that good at leadership but I always have a strong desire to lead. After thinking for a moment I got caught up thinking that I don't even try to understand or I can't understand other people's will and aspirations. I am already working on developing my emotional intelligence by applying various things and giving some time to myself. I am a person who can work harder on self-development so I just realized that I just need to know my weakness and formulate plans to improve on them. I also lack channeling with others so I can't even channel on someone for my development. I can have great confidence in mass after an overnight practice but I lack it when there's a surprise. My words just don't go fluent. Coming to adaptability, it's tough for me. I can learn anything to get adapted but it's tough for me to apply it I real life. Leaving my drawbacks behind, I am good at executing my plans and make them continue. Also, I have great aspirations and positive thinking which will help me a lot in this improvement. I also realized that I think everything positively, that may be best for various reasons but not good for everything. I need to learn to think outside the box and uniquely. I have learned many things that can be applied to my self-development and promotion. After this topic, I think I will upgrade myself to a newer me.

Emotional Intelligence is a topic that will help me a lot. It made me more crystal-clear. I got to know my strength and weakness. I got to know how I dealt with others in past and also developed a road map of how I will deal with others socially. I am committed to make more long-lasting social relationships and raise myself socially.